MEd Higher Education

Student Learning Outcomes

Graduates of the MEd Higher Education program will be expected to have demonstrated knowledge and proficiency in the following areas:

SLO1: Understand the history and sociology of higher education, and organizational and student development theory.

SLO2: Advocate for the inclusion and practices and policies that represent the differences and diversity of postsecondary student, faculty and staff populations.

SLO3: Think critically as a member of a complex and global society with responsibilities in postsecondary institutions.

SLO4: Effectively use data for assessment and decision-making.

SLO5: Effectively use marketing, negotiation, and conflict resolution skills.

SLO6: Effectively use technology and distance learning, along with traditional communication methods.

SLO7: Respond with innovative solutions to contemporary shifts and challenges in the higher education landscape, including social, political and economic changes which directly impact the higher education profession.