PERFORMANCE REVIEW OF PROBATIONARY EMPLOYEES

INSTRUCTIONS

Employees and supervisors PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

The probationary period is an extremely important stage in the selection process of employees. Periodic work performance reviews should occur between the probationary employee and supervisor. The new employee should be informed as to how the supervisor interprets on the job performance. By the end of the probationary period, the supervisor should have confidence that the probationary employee meets performance standards, at the minimum, before making a recommendation to permanent appointment.

1. Performance reviews of probationary employees must be submitted to university Human Resources Department as follows:
 - a. At the end of 45 and 90 days from initial employment date.
 - b. If permanent employment not given at 90 days, reviews to be submitted every 30 days until permanent status given or until employee is separated. If permanent status is not granted within nine months, the employee must be separated.
 - c. At any time that employee is terminated involuntarily.
2. All probationary employees are to be rated on Job Performance Factors A thru E which includes; Knowledge of Work, Quality of Work, Quantity of Work, etc. Job Factors F and G are left blank to allow the supervisor the opportunity to include two factors that are particularly important to satisfactory job performance. Make certain the factors are job related, for example; "Use and care of equipment" would be job related for an Equipment Operator. SECTIONS F AND G MUST BE COMPLETED. Further information and suggested performance factors are included in the Employee Performance Management Program guidebook. Human Resources should be contacted for a copy.
3. The definition of the rating of each performance factor that best describes actual job performance is selected by the supervisor. The rating should be placed in the space available in the column to the right of each performance factor.
4. The "Comments that Justify Rating" area, must be completed to support the rating given. Expansion of justifications as well as writing any other narrative which would be beneficial to performance explanations may be made in the Narrative Comments, Section H.
5. On the job performance must be discussed with the employee. The form should be reviewed and the employees' signature obtained.
6. In conjunction with the Probationary Performance Appraisal requesting permanent status be granted, the supervisor MUST prepare, complete and submit the PERFORMANCE PLAN, Form HR 6.30. This will insure the new employee is aware of the supervisor's expectations for the coming review period. This is a very important part of the overall performance appraisal system. REMEMBER TO SUBMIT THE PERFORMANCE (WORK) PLAN WITH THE FINAL PROBATIONARY EVALUATION. For additional information please contact Human Resources.

Special Note: When using this form to evaluate a temporary, we suggest you follow the appropriate guidelines outlined above.
