Intro to Africana Studies (AFN130)
M/W/F 9-9:50 a.m. in BR 101
Professor: Dr. Keryn Vickers

Designed as the gateway to Africana Studies, this course is an interdisciplinary exploration of the collective experience of Blacks across the African Diaspora, which includes various continents and countries in addition to the United States. The course provides students a framework for engagement in the process of self-discovery and for achieving a more global understanding of the unique ways in which Africans and people of African descent have constituted our world. The course, which introduces critical theoretical approaches and builds vital and analytic skills, provides an overview of the historical, socio-economic, and cultural dynamics of black life.
