Hometown: Huntersville, NC

Philosophy: My philosophy as a peer mentor is to be the resource one may need to aide them in the decision of classes to choose. I will aim to give the best assistance in the decisions about your future. Students know themselves the best, and therefore should take control of their future. I will encourage every person to reach their academic goals throughout their college career.

Mission: As a Peer Advisor my mission is to guide my peers to academic success. I will do this by providing students with the necessary information about their major. I've been at UNCW since I was a freshman and understand the complex nature of picking the correct classes to take. I will guide you to ensure all classes you are taking will count towards your major.

Tips for Academic Success:

- I. Read the textbook. Professors don't just assign the textbooks for you to purchase and never use. The best way to understand everything they discuss in class and information that will be on the test is to read the chapters of the textbook.
- II. Choose a class that is of interest to you. We all have to take the university studies classes, the best way to thrive in those classes is to take an interesting one. If you take class you are not interested in find something about it that you like. Having an interest will allow you to want to learn more and read in depth.
- III. Find the way you prefer to study, whether it is with classmates in a study group, or on the second floor of the library in silence. I personally like to study in the Cameron Lab, or on the bottom floor of the library with a study group because it helps me stay focused.
