
Become a Teacher!
Why Watson?

Our undergraduate programs offer:

- Small class sizes with personal attention and guidance
- Dedicated faculty with extensive classroom teaching experience
- Individualized advising and support from application through graduation
- A collaborative learning environment
- Vibrant student organizations
- Strong ties to partners in the community
- Extensive field and classroom experiences
- A full-time internship during the final semester
- Opportunities for international experiences
- High job placement rates
- Strong preparation for effective teaching and learning in the classroom

Become a Teacher!

Teaching is a challenging and highly rewarding profession that allows you to have a lasting, positive impact on students. Undergraduate degree and licensure programs at UNCW’s Watson College of Education provide a pathway to earn the credentials needed to teach students in grades pre-K through high school.

Each program offers field experiences in local classrooms, the Education Lab, the community and abroad. These experiences give future teachers the opportunity to apply theory to practice in a wide range of real-world settings, and build skills and confidence needed to succeed in the classroom.

Degree and licensure programs include:

- Education of Young Children (B-K)
- Elementary Education (K-6)
- Middle Grades (6-9)
- Secondary Education (9-12)
- Special Education (General or Adapted Curriculum, K-12)
- French, Spanish or Music (K-12)
- Physical Education and Health (K-12)

Education minors are offered in:

- Educational Studies
- English as a Second Language
- Leadership Studies

Contact us today! Student Advising and Integrated Leadership · watsonadvising@uncw.edu or 910.962.7745

For more information, visit uncw.edu/ed/learn/undergrad.html