Games Good to Common Core – Online Professional Development Workshop for Teachers

Title: Games Good to the Core

Fully Online Workshop for Teachers and Administrators

Common Core + Games= Effective, Engaging Instruction

Instructor- Dr. Jeff Ertzberger, University of North Carolina Wilmington

<http://uncw.edu/core>

- * Make your classroom engaging today!
- * Need creative ideas how to implement and teach Common Core Standards?
- * Would you like to create lessons that engage your students while richly covering standards?
- * Have you always wanted to use games to enhance your courses but just couldn't find ones that match your curriculum?
- * Looking for professional development that allows you to set your own schedule and work when and where you want?

Online Workshop Description:

During this fully online course, instructor Dr. Jeff Ertzberger will expose participants to a host of free and simple to use technology resources that can be effectively integrated into Common Core based lessons. Web pages, pre-made games, game templates, iPad applications, and more will be covered. Most importantly, participants will receive proven strategies to effectively enhance any Common Core Curriculum Standard with these resources. Participants are provided with some of the best, most engaging resources available and shown the strategies and skills needed to effectively integrate them into their classroom. It is the best of all workshops! Register and begin this fully online workshop today!

Course registration is currently open. Register online and begin this course today: uncw.edu/core

Save the Date: BT Professional Development Days

There are still a few spots available for the remaining Beginning Teacher Professional Development Days on February 22, and April 19. Registration is open! The cost of attending each workshop is $35/day; topics will include technology tools for the 21st century classroom, classroom management strategies, leadership in the innovation age, and much, much more! Visit www.uncw.edu/ed/teach1 for more details!!
