Post-Baccalaureate Certificate Program in Science and Medical Writing

Refine your professional writing and visual design skills

“I appreciated the opportunity to create practical, usable documents. I have a much better understanding of the variety of work scientific and medical writers do now, and I feel more prepared to explore opportunities in these fields.”

—Heather Roughton, '20

The UNCW Department of English offers a 15-hour Post-Baccalaureate Certificate Program in Science and Medical Writing designed to help graduate students and working professionals improve their ability to compose and design effective texts, including research papers, grant applications, graphics and social media content.

- The certificate complements graduate degrees in all science disciplines, and the additional credential may help working professionals move forward in their careers.
- The online program gives students maximum flexibility.
- Experience in science and medical writing is not required.
